The Warrenton Female College is now offered for sale, on reasonable terms. This College has been in successful operation, for over twelve years, and, during that time, it has earned a reputation as an Institution of learning, second to none in N. C.

The location is such as to warrant a full attendance of pupils, being very accessible from any point, especially the Eastern portions of N. C. and Va.

The Committee, who have been empowered to make sale of this property, deem it unnecessary to say more of this Institution as its character for a high grade of scholarship, and the elevated standard of morals inculcated, under the eye and supervision of its late President, E. E. Parham, is already well known.

The society in which this College is located is known to be equal to any in the South.

There is now a sufficiency of Buildings and other Conveniences attached to this Real Estate, to conduct a large and flourishing school. The premises contain about SIXTY ACRES of Land a material portion of which is within the Corporation. This, with all or a part of the furniture, &c., belonging to the same, can be purchased with the land and buildings. This property will be offered privately for sale until Wednesday the 3rd day October next, and, if not then sold, will be on that day sold, at public auction, to the highest bidder.

DISCOURSE

In Memory of the Life and Character

OF THE

HON. GEO. E. BADGER,

Delivered, by Request of the Bar of Wake County, at Raleigh, July 19th, 1866,

BY

WILLIAM A. GRAHAM,

OF ORANGE.

(CONCLUDED.)

On the other hand, there had been for years at the North a party organization, not numerous at first, but which at this period had swollen into a formidable power, whose avowed object was the extinction of slavery; who had denounced the constitution, so far as it upheld or tolerated it, as a covenant with the infernal powers; had absolved themselves from its maintenance in this particular, and avowed their preference for a disruption of the Union unless slavery should be abolished: in the territories and States as well. More moderate men in that section, while not agreeing with these extremists, denied emphatically either that the Constitution gave to slavery a footing in the territories or bound Congress to maintain, or not interfere with, its existence there; and that in the exercise of a legislative discretion they might encourage, tolerate or forbid it; the great majority favoring its prohibition in the territories while they held themselves bound to non interference in the States. In this conflict a third party arose which affirmed that Congress had no power over the question in the territories: that the people who settled in those distant regions were entitled, (not only when applying for admission into the Union as a State, but whenever organized into a territory or at any time thereafter) to determine on the establishment or rejection of slavery as well as all other questions of domestic policy; and by consequence, that the whole history of the Government in the regulation of its territories had been an error.

Either of the contending parties was accustomed to tolerate very considerable aberrations and even heresies against its creed, to acquire or preserve party ascendancy, or to achieve success in a Presidential election, to which latter object no concessions and no sacrifices were deemed excessive. And the flame on the main topic was probably fanned by many, on both sides, with a view to the marshalling of forces for this quadrennial contest for power and patronage.

Be this as it may, never were themes presented for sectional parties so well adapted to deepen and widen the opened breach between them, or pressed with more intensity or zeal. In the ardor of the contest old landmarks were discarded, and old friends repudiated, if not found in accordance with new positions assumed in its progress. William Pinkney, the great champion of Southern interests, at the period of the Missouri agitation, was pronounced an abolitionist on the floor of the Senate by the highest Southern authority, and the doors of Faneuil Hall were closed on Daniel Webster, whose eloquence had illustrated it more than that of any man ever had before or ever will again, by the authorities of Boston, for words of truth, soberness and conciliation, spoken in the Senate, and this while Clay (once so much deferred to by them as a party leader) sat by, admiring and encouraging at every sentence Webster had uttered.

Between these excited parties, Mr. Badger stood approved by neither. As far back as the Mexican war, perceiving, as he thought, the dangers to flow from the adjustment of the interests of slavery, provided conquests should be made and new territories acquired, he had repeatedly endeavored to bring the war to a close and to bar out those dangers to the Union, by abstaining from the acquisitions of new domains, while the fierce contestants were both eager for extensive conquests, the one with the flattering, but delusive hope of expanding the area of slavery, the other with the settled purpose to apply to all such conquests the Wilmot proviso and to exclude slavery.

When peace came with those splendid acquisitions of territory so gratifying to the national pride, he was not disappointed in discovering in them an apple of discord which was to prove fatal to tranquility at home. In the contention which was thus inaugurated, he steadily supported the rights of his own section, maintaining the justice and expediency of opening the territories to all emigrants without restriction as to any species of property. In an argument, replete with scriptural learning, he defended the servitude existing in the South, under the name of slavery, as not inconsistent with the divine law, more than justified by Jewish precedents, and not forbidden by the benignant teachings of the Savior of the world, who found in the Roman Empire, at his coming, and left without condemnation, a system of far greater severity. He reminded Northern Senators of the responsibility of their ancestors for the introduction and establishment of slavery in this country, ours being but purchasers from them, at second hand, for a consideration vastly greater than they had paid; the profits being the foundation of much of their wealth which their consciences did not forbid them to retain. He brought home to their sense of duty and of honor the obligation to maintain the Constitution, so long as it remained the Constitution, in all its parts; as well those which as individuals they disapproved, as those to which they assented. If any representive of the South urged any or all of these considerations in favor of the rights of his section, in the subject of dispute, with more earnestness and ability than Mr. Badger, it is some one whose argument has not fallen under my observation. But he refused to go further. He refused to argue that Congress had no Constitutional power to legislate on the subject of slavery in the territories. He discussed the question with boldness and adduced a decision of the Supreme Court, announced in an opinion of Judge Marshall, to the effect, that the power did exist; and therefore he addressed his appeals to the legislative discretion of Congress. For this he incurred the disapprobation of the extreme advocates of Southern interests. But his opinion on the question had been deliberately formed, and though he maintained that the exclusion of the Southern emigrant with his peculiar property from these territories would be an unjust exercise and abuse of power, he declined to make what he believed to be a false issue, in pronouncing it unconstitutional. He dealt with the whole subject in the interest of peace, in subordination to the Constitution, in the hope of allaying excitement and with an earnest desire for continued Union. He therefore gladly co-operated with his old political associates Clay, Webster, Pearce of Maryland, Bell, Mangum, Berrien, Dawson, as well as his Democratic opponents Cass, Douglass, Dickinson, Foote and other compatriots of both parties in the well remembered measures of compromise of 1850, which calmed the waves of agitation, and promised a lasting repose from this disturbing element. An effect which was fully realized, with the occasional exception of resistance to the law in the surrender of fugitive slaves, until the unfortunate revival of the quarrel by the repeal, in 1854, in the law for the organization of the territories of Kansas and Nebraska, of the provision of the Missouri compromise, as it was called, by which slavery was restricted from extending north of thirty-six degrees, thirty minutes, the northern boundary of that State. His participation in this measure of repeal Mr. Badger regarded as the most serious error of his public life. He lived to see consequences flow from it which he had not contemplated, and publicly expressed his regret that he had given it his support. Not on the ground of any breach of faith; for, as he amply demonstrated in his speech on the passage of the measure, the representatives of the North in Congress had, in the Oregon territorial bill, as well as in other instances, demonstrated that they attached to it no sanctity.—Yet many good men among their constituents did; and politicians who had, since the settlement of 1850, found "their occupation gone," eagerly welcomed this new theme for agitation. The experience of climate, labor and production had shown that African slavery could not be attended with profit north of this parallel, and the repeal was regarded as a flout, defiance and aggression which provoked the resentment of thousands who had never before co-operated with that extreme faction which conspired the destruction of slavery in despite of the Constitution. Followed up as this measure was by the impotent attempt to enforce protection to the institution in Kansas, when it neither did nor could exist without unreasonable aid, which was brought forward after Mr. Badger left the Senate and in which there is no reason to believe he would have concurred, it aroused an opposition, which, when embodied in the organization of party, was irresistible.—He was no propagandist of slavery, though all the affections of his home and heart seconded the efforts of his great mind in defending it as an institution of the country recognized and guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States. He was too sagacious to believe it could be benefitted in any way, provoking the shock of civil war, and too truthful and patriotic to trifle with it, as a means of rallying parties or to subserve any of the interests of faction.—In voting for the repeal of the Missouri restriction, he looked upon it as having been overvalued in its practical importance at first, abandoned by the North as effete, if not disregarded from the begining, and its removal out of the way as but conforming the system of territorial law to that part of the compromise of 1850, pertaining to the territories, which left the adoption or rejection of slavery to be decided by the inhabitants when framing a Constitution, preparatory to their admission as a State of the Union, not anticipating the recoil in public sentiment, which was the first step in the overthrow of slavery itself.

I have been thus tedious in review of the history of this period, because it was upon topics arising out of this great subject of controversy, ever uppermost in the public mind, that Mr. Badger made his most frequent and probably most elaborate efforts in the Senate, and for the further reason that in the heated atmosphere of the time his opinions as expressed and the moderation of his course were, by some, supposed to imply indifference to the interests of his section. Time and disaster are not unfrequently necessary to vindicate true wisdom.

His public career was but an episode in his life, which not having aspired to, there were branches of political science, to which he had devoted no study. He was as averse to the details of revenue and finance as Charles James Fox, and could probably have united with that statesman in the declaration that he had never read a treatise on political economy. But on all subjects pertaining to general policy, or to the history, jurisprudence, or Constitution of the country, he commanded a deference yielded to scarcely any other individual, after the withdrawal of Mr. Webster; and as a speaker and writer of English, according to the testimony of Judge Butler, of South Carolina, had no peer in the Senate, save Webster when there.

He delighted in repeating the rule for the construction of the Constitution, which he had heard enunciated by Judge Marshall in the Circuit Court for North Carolina. "The Constitution of the United States" (said he) "is to be construed not strictly, not loosely, but honestly. The powers granted should be freely exercised to effect the objects of the grant, while there should be a careful abstinence from the assumption of any not granted, but reserved." With this simple rule for his guide, with an innate love of truth and wonderful perspicuity in its discernment, with an ethics which permitted no paltering in deference to the authority or suggestion of faction, his arguments on Constitutional questions were models of moral demonstration. Such was the confidence reposed in his accuracy and candor on questions of this nature, that his opinions were sought for practical guidance, alike by friends and opponents, and such was the personal favor and kindness entertained towards him by all his associates that, at the expiration of his term, the rare compliment was paid of the adoption, by an unanimous vote of the Senate, of an expression of regret at his departure.

After ceasing to be a Senator, he held, until the commencement of the late calamitous war, the place of one of the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution. In his professional visits to Washington, until the interruption of intercourse by that dire event, and in all his correspondence with public men, he never departed from that course of moderation and peace on the exciting subject of the times, which had characterized him as a Senator; joined heartily in the movement of his old Whig friends for the organization of a Constitutional Union party to abate the violence of faction which was too surely tending to disunion, and to make an appeal to the people to rescue the country from the impending peril. The result of this movement was the nomination for the first offices of the Government of Bell and Everett; and Mr. Badger accepted the candidacy as one of the Electors on this ticket, and visited various parts of North Carolina addressing the people in its support. In these addresses, with the frankness which belonged to his nature, he freely admitted that there was a strong probability of the election of Mr. Lincoln, not merely from a division of votes among three other candidates, but from the strength of his party in the Northern States, founded on the principle of opposition to slavery; that in that event it was the design of a large portion of the supporters of Mr. Breckenridge to attempt to destroy the Union by the secession of the Southern States, and that there was reason to believe his defeat and the election of Mr. Lincoln was desired by this latter class, because of the opportunity it would afford for a dissolution of the Union, a purpose which they had long cherished. While, therefore, he advocated the election of Mr. Bell, he conjured the people, no matter who might be elected, to acquiesce in the decision and give no countenance to secession. Although, with the exception of a small fraction, the people were averse to disunion, the majority were persuaded, that this was an overstatement of the case, and cast their votes for Mr. Breckenridge as for an usual party nominee. When the election was past and the proceedings which immediately followed in other States verified Mr. Badger's anticipations, the people began to turn to him, and those of like opinions, for guidance in the future. And to persons in distant parts of the Union it is, no doubt, a matter of mystery how he, with all his antecedents in favor of Union, became involved in war against the government of the United States. The case of Mr. Badger, in this particular, is the case of at least three-fourths of the people of the State, who relied upon his counsels for their action, quite as much as upon those of any other individual, and requires a word of explanation. Notwithstanding the long and acrimonious disputations which had been carried on in Congress, and at the hustings, and the sentiments declared in opposition to slavery by Mr. Lincoln and his supporters, Mr. Badger maintained, that his election afforded no sufficient cause for a resort to revolution; (as to the right claimed, of a State to secede, he had never for a moment believed in it or given it the least countenance;) that the accession of such a party to power would require increased vigilance over the rights and interests of the South, but the majority in Congress was not lost to us, if the members from all the Southern States would remain and be faithful, and that the judiciary was open to any just complaint, even if the Executive should attempt aggression. And after every State South of North Carolina, to the confines of Mexico, had adopted ordinances of secession, the people of the State rejected a proposition to call a Convention to consider the question. But when Virginia, our neighbor on the Northern frontier, also withdrew, and Tennessee on the West had taken measures for the same object, when war had been actually begun, no matter by whose rashness or folly, and the only alternatives presented were in the choice of the side we should espouse, considerations of national or State interest, safety and necessity, such as are not unfrequently forced upon the decision of neutrals by the conduct of belligerents not connected under the same government, at once occurred and were obliged to be weighed with the obligations of Constitutional duty. Our borders were surrounded on all sides, except that washed by the ocean, by seceded States. Our youth must go forth to battle with or against these States. The Union, we had so long and so sincerely cherished, was a Union in its integrity, and next to that, and as a part of it, a Union with neighboring States, in which were our kindred, and most intimate friends, and identical institutions. Slavery, whatever may be thought of it elsewhere or now, constituted more than one half of all our individual and public wealth. It had paid our taxes, built our Railroads, reared our Seminaries of education and charity, and was intimately connected with the order and repose of our society. Withal, in the acrimony of a long quarrel its maintenance had become a point of honor. In the actual posture of affairs which promised to continue while the war lasted, instead of fifteen States in which slavery existed, whose representatives were to maintain a common interest in the halls of Congress, there were to be but three or at most four, and all these, except our own, with a minor interest in the system. A civil war which threatened to be sanguinary and protracted, kindled avowedly for the protection of slavery, was not likely to end in defeat of the insurgent States, without the destruction of the institution in them, and after no long time, in the adhering States also. Though far from approving the course of the recusant States, victory on the side of those who held the reins of Government could not inure in benefit, nor without serious disaster, to us.

These ties of blood, vicinity, institutions and interests, the desire to avoid internecine strife among our own people, which must have been immediately precipitated by a zealous minority with the local Government, Legislative and Executive, in their hands, impelled Mr. Badger and those who acted with him, to decline to take arms against their own section, in favor of the distant authority of the National Government and as a consequence to unite with those whose actions they had deprecated and endeavored to prevent, and with whom they had had little sympathy or co-operation in the politics of the past. The support of the undertaking, if concurred in by all the slaveholding States, which was confidently represented to be certain, appeared to afford hope of a safer and better future than its suppression by force.—The determination of the question, as I know, occasioned him pain and embarrassment. But when made, it was firmly maintained. He accepted a seat in the Convention which passed the ordinance declaring the separation of the State from the Federal Union, and gave to this ordinance his sanction, not however without a distinct declaration of his disbelief in the doctrine of secession, as a Constitutional right. He also sustained measures for the prosecution of vigorous war, as in his conception the surest and shortest road to peace, but was ever vigilant of the dignity and just rights of the State, the encroachments of the military authority, the jurisdiction of the civil tribunals and the protection and liberty of the citizen. He sought no patronage or favor for himself or his. His sons served in the ranks of the army and bore their part in the perils and adventures of war.

While it yet raged he was stricken by the hand of disease which partially obscured his faculties and withdrew him from public view.

He survived, however, until after the return of peace, and in the twilight of mind, with which he was yet favored, rejoiced in the deliverance of the Country from the calamities of war, and very sincerely acquiesced in a return to his allegiance to the Government of the United States.

These observations on the professional and public life of the subject of our memoir have been so prolonged, that the occasion will permit but a few further remarks upon his general attainments, his intellectual and moral character, and usefulness as a citizen. It was the remark of Lord Bacon that "reading makes a full man, conversation a ready man, and writing an accurate man." Mr. Badger's reading was confined, with the exception of that knowledge of the dead languages, which he had acquired in his youthful studies, to the literature of our own language.

With the most approved authors in this he had a familiar acquaintance, and, as already remarked, excelled in his accomplishments as a critic. The field of learning, which next to jurisprudence, he most affected, and perhaps even preferred to that, was moral science. Upon the sublime truths of this science in the conversations of his friends, his remarks and illustrations were often not unworthy of Alexander or Wayland, Butler or Whately. "In it" (says one of the most intimate of his friends and cotemporaries) "the rapidity of his perceptions and the accuracy of his deductions were marvelous.—Place before his mind any proposition of moral science, and instantly he carried it out, either to exact truth most beautifully enunciated, or reduced it to an absurdity." To his acquisitions in the kindred topics of didactic divinity, or theology as a science, only a professional theologian can do justice. An earnest member of the Protestant Episcopal church, though but a layman, he ventured on more than one occasion to discuss matters of discipline and doctrine in the character of a Pamphleteer, in opposition to Clergymen of note; and in a memorable instance with the head of the diocese himself with such signal success, that although the Bishop ultimately united himself with the Romish church, whither Mr. Badger charged that he was tending, not another member of his denomination left its communion.

He was averse to the labor of writing, and beyond an address before the literary societies of the University, the reports, by his own hand, of some of his speeches in Congress, and other pamphlets, on subjects political or religious, has left few written performances. But he had the accuracy, in thought and speech, of a practised writer. In conversation, he realized, in the fullest extent, Bacon's idea of "readiness," and shone with a lustre rarely equalled. The activity and playfulness of his thoughts, and the gayety of his disposition, inclined him to parody and repartee to such a degree that his conversation was oftentimes but amusing levity. But in a moment it rose to the profoundest reflection and most fascinating eloquence. His knowledge was ever at instantaneous command, as it was far more the result of his own meditations than of acquisitions from others, and fancy lent her aid in giving a grandeur to his conceptions on all the subjects of his grave discourse. After all the public displays in which he enchained the attention of judges, jurors, senators, or promiscuous assemblies with equal admiration and delight, it is a matter for doubt, among those who knew him well, whether his brightest thoughts and most felicitous utterances, the versatility of his genius, and the vast range of his contemplations, were not oftener witnessed in his boon and social hours, in the converse of friends, around his own hospitable board, or at a village inn, or on a public highway, all without pedantry or apparent effort, "as if he stooped to touch the loftiest thought," than in these elaborate and studied exhibitions.

He affected no mystery, and wore no mask, and stood ready, in familiar colloquy, to make good, by new and apt illustrations, any sentiment advanced in formal argument, or to abandon it as untenable if satisfied of error.

His reverence for truth, to which allusion has been already made in the course of these observations, was, even above his intellectual powers, his most striking characteristic. He was accustomed to speak of it "as the most distinguishing attribute of God himself, and the love of it, as giving to one moral being an eminence above another." To its discovery he delighted to apply the powers of his remarkable intellect; to its influence he was ready to surrender his most cherished convictions whenever found to be erroneous.

The fruits of this were seen in the crowning virtues of his character; a christian of ardent and intelligent piety, without intolerance towards others, a lawyer without chicanery or artifice, a statesman without being a factionist, a party man above the low arts of the demagogue, a gentleman and citizen enlightened, social, charitable, liberal, impressing his character upon the manners and morals of his times; ready to render aid in every good and noble work, and prompt to resist and repel any evil influence, no matter by what array of numbers, power or vitiated public opinion supported. I have known no man to whose moral courage may be more fitly applied the ideal of the Latin poet, as rendered in free translation:

"The man whose mind on virtue bent,
Pursues some greatly good intent
With undiverted aim,
Serene beholds the angry crowd,
Nor can their clamors fierce and loud
His stubborn honor tame.
Not the proud tyrant's fiercest threat,
Nor storms, that from their dark retreat
The rolling surges wake;
Not Jove's dread bolt that shakes the pole,
The firmer purpose of his soul
With all its power can shake!"

In the latter years of his life, actuated by a desire to be useful in his day and generation, whenever opportunity and his ability might allow, he accepted the office of Justice of the Peace, an office which, to the honor of those who have filled it in North Carolina from the first organization of civil government until now, has ever been performed without pecuniary reward; and took considerable interest in administering justice in the County Courts of Wake, giving to this inferior tribunal the dignity and value of a Superior Court, to the great satisfaction of the bar and the public.

As a part of his public service it is proper also to add, that for many years Mr. Badger was one of the most active Trustees of the University of the State, and especially as a member of the Committee on lands then held in Tennessee, from his professional abilities, without fee or reward, rendered signal assistance to the Institution.

He was thrice married, first, as before mentioned, to the daughter of Governor Turner, second, to the daughter of Col. Wm. Polk, and third to Mrs. Delia B. Williams, daughter of Sherwood Haywood, Esq., in each instance forming an alliance with an old family of the State, distinguished by public service and great personal worth from an early period. The last named lady, the worthy companion of his life for thirty years, who survives him as his widow, receives in her bereavement the condolence and sympathy, not merely of this community and State, but there are those in distant lands and in other States of the Union whom, not the lapse of years nor the excitements of intervening events, nor the fiery gulf of civil war, shall separate from a friendship accorded to her, and her departed husband, as representatives of the personal character, the society and domestic virtues of their native State in better days of the Republic.

By the two latter marriages he left numerous descendants.

Taking his accustomed walk at an early hour in the morning of January 5th, 1863, he was prostrated by a paralytic stroke near the mineral spring in the environs of the city of Raleigh.—And although retaining his self possession and ability to converse until assistance was kindly furnished, on the way home his mind wandered and before reaching his residence, his faculty of continuous speech deserted him, never again to return. His mental powers after a brief interval rallied; insomuch, that he took pleasure in reading, and in listening to the conversations of friends, whose visits afforded him much satisfaction; and with assistance could walk for exercise in the open air, but was never afterwards able to command language, except for brief sentences, failing often in these to convey his full meaning.

In this condition he lingered until the 11th. of May 1866, when, after a few days illness from renewed attacks of the same nature, he expired, having recently completed the 71st. year of his age.

MY BRETHREN OF THE WAKE BAR:—My task is done. I have endeavored but "to hold the mirror up to nature." If the image reflected appears, in any of its features, magnified, it was not so intended. Yet the memory of a friendship, dating back to kind offices and notice in my student life, and extending through all my active manhood, may not have been without its influence in giving color to the picture. But the character in our contemplation was of no ordinary proportions. At the bar of the State he wore the mantle of Gaston and Archibald Henderson, for a much longer period than either, worthily and well, with no diminution of its honors. In the highest court of the Union, he was the acknowledged compeer of Webster, Crittenden, Ewing, Johnson, Berrien, Walker, Cushing and their colleagues. In the Senate, when Clay, Webster and Calhoun still remained there, not to name others of scarcely inferior repute, he was among the foremost men in that august assembly, upholding the rights of his own State and section, with manliness and ability, but with candor, moderation and true wisdom, which sought to harmonise conflicting elements, and avert the calamities of civil strife. In morals inflexible, without stain or suspicion of vice. In manners and social intercourse, genial, frank, hospitable, with colloquial powers to instruct, amuse and fascinate, in every circle in which he moved, and "with a heart open as day to melting charity." The fame of such a man is a source of natural and just pride to the people of the State. This sentiment is that which the poet describes in the Englishman, when he sings

"It is enough to satisfy the ambition of a private man,
That Chatham's language was his mother tongue,
And Wolf's great name compatriot with his own."

How he was appreciated in this city where he so long resided, and the State which he so ardently loved and so faithfully served, is attested by the evidences of this day,—the suspension of business and the concourse of this most respectable assembly, many from distant portions of the State, who have come up to unite with us in these "last sad rites of tenderness" to one so much admired, esteemed and loved; as well as by the general, and in many instances, public, expression of regret throughout North Carolina upon the announcement of his sad affliction and subsequent death. How much he will be missed as a member of the community, as the friend of order and law, religion and unquestionable morality, as a professional man, counsellor and advocate of unrivalled ability and reputation, as an intellectual and cultivated man, with armor bright and powers ever at his command, presenting a model for the emulation of our ingenuous youth, as a public character, an adviser and true friend, but no flatterer of the people, and an unflinching supporter of their rights wherever truth and duty might lead, time and experience may demonstrate. There is no public aspect, however, in which his loss is so much to be deplored, as in the relation he bore to the past, and his probable efficiency in solving the problem of the day. Who so capable of interpreting the Constitution which forms our Government, and the alleged laws of war by which it is claimed to be suspended or superseded, as that gifted mind and sincere nature, so trusted on these topics in former years, and so thoroughly imbued with the spirit and teachings of Marshall? Who so deserving to be heard on the pacification and re-establishment of order and right among thirty-five millions of freemen, as he who by his temperance, calmness and intelligent Constitutional opinions, in the commencement of our national difficulties, incurred the censure of many in our own section of country, without receiving the approbation of their adversaries; who, in a period of most unusual party acrimony, never violated the courtesies of debate, and whose personal associations and friendships were found alike on either side of the great line of sectional division? Who so fitted for the explosion and correction of error, of allaying the ignoble passions of hatred and revenge, and recalling the national affections inspired by a common and honorable history, to remove the scales from eyes that will not see, and to rebuke the rage of faction, threatening to realize the assertion of Mr. Fox, in his history of James, the second, that "the most dangerous of all revolutions is a restoration?"

To that good Being in whose hands are the destinies of nations and individuals, by whose divine agency crooked paths are often made straight, and issues granted out of all troubles, in ways not visible to human eyes, let us unite in commending every interest of our beloved country.

THE SENTINEL.

WM. E. PELL, SEATON GALES. } Editors.

Monday Evening, July 23, 1866.

FOR THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES, AS IT IS, AND THE UNION AS IT WAS.
NO FURTHER AMENDMENTS.

FOR GOVERNOR,
JONATHAN WORTH,
OF RANDOLPH.

Remember that the election for the ratification of the amended Constitution of North Carolina, will be held on the 2d., 3rd. and 4th of August next, throughout the State.

THE communication of "X. Y. Z" is crowded out. It shall appear to-morrow.

District Convention.

Delegates to the District Convention are reminded that it will be held in this City on the 25th inst., being next Wednesday.

National Union Convention.

We do not remember ever to have seen a more general and enthusiastic uprising in popular sentiment, in so short a time, than the interest taken in favor of the Philadelphia Convention. From present indications, every District in this State will be represented and the State at large.

To-morrow we will publish the call made by the Executive Committee of the National Union Club, which lays down the programme and defines the qualifications of the delegates invited.

We have expressed no opinion in favor of the particular gentlemen who should be selected.—Indeed, we have no choice beyond this: that the delegates should be chosen as far as possible from among persons who were known to have, in former days, belonged to the old Whig and Democratic parties—that they should be men possessing truly conservative sentiments and feelings—men who will yield what is right and proper, to effect the objects of the Convention, but who both know the rights of the States and the people, and will dare maintain them—and finally, as suggested by a correspondent on Saturday, that they are willing to attend the Convention at their own expense. This latter notion, however, should weigh nothing against having a representation by men who will wisely and faithfully represent the people of the State.

Committing our interests to the hands of wise, safe men, no evil can arise from sending delegates to the Convention. Indeed, its objects are so necessary, so momentous at the present time, that were the South to fail to send delegates she would be recreant to her own good, and to the general welfare of the whole nation.

Proclamation of Gov. Worth.

We call attention to the official communication from the State Executive in to-day's issue. The restoration of full jurisdiction to our Courts over all civil matters pertaining to all persons, is what every good citizen desires. The complications which still hang over this matter, and the exercise of military authority and jurisdiction over civil matters, as still claimed by Gen. Grant and the Secretary of War, strike us as peculiarly perplexing and difficult to understand, in view of the doctrines and principles inculcated and the positions clearly developed in President Johnson's Peace Proclamation. According to that instrument, which has the force of law, the military jurisdiction over civil matters is at an end, and placed again in the hands of the civil authority.

PENNSYLVANIA.—The campaign is afoot and the fight is already warm in Pennsylvania, for the October elections. One of the greatest gatherings that the political contest has called together, assembled at Reading on the 18th. We have already published some account of it, as also of the speech of Montgomery Blair on the occasion. In addition to the remarks of that gentleman as given, he is heretofore reported as saying:

"The Democrats had presented the spectacle of furnishing men and means to defend the Government, at the same time that Government was in the hands of their political adversaries; thus proving, to some extent, the intense feeling of devotion to country which ever characterized them; this, too, when, as the speaker knew (he being a member of the Government), that Government was wielded in a most unscrupulous manner."

LATEST foreign advices state that the Italians are advancing in spite of the French orders. It is also rumored that the French flag has been raised at Venetia, and that France will hold Venetia as a guarantee for the present.

THE PROCEEDINGS of the Stockholders of the Chatham Railroad Company, at thiir late meeting in this city, are crowded out to-day.

THE FOLLOWING is Brownlow's dispatch to Sumner announcing the passage of the Constitutional amendment by less than a quorum of the bogus Legislature of Tennessee: "The battle has been fought and won. The amendment was carried by a vote of 48 against 11.—Two of Johnson's creatures refused to vote.—Give my respects to the Dead Dog at the White House." "Glorious old patriot."

ERRATUM.—An error occurred in that portion of Gov. Graham's Oration published in our last, by which the case of Whitaker vs. Freeman, therein referred to, was described as "an action for libel in twenty-five different Courts." It should have read "twenty-five different counts."

There are one hundred and nineteen freedmen's schools in Alabama.

Stewart's Fifth avenue residence will cost $2,500,000.

CITY AND STATE ITEMS.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.—The Atlantic Hotel, Beaufort, will be opened to the public on the 27th., with new furniture and fixtures. The proprietor presents the most attractive inducements for visitors.

There will be a grand Ball and Tournament at Jones' White Sulphur Springs, on the 31st. inst. The enterprising lessee, Maj. Hope, is sparing no expense or exertions to render the sojourn of his guests agreeable.

Mr. H. S. Milum will commence another series of lessons in dancing to-morrow. See his card. He refers for testimonials to all those who have attended his first course.

Pulliam, Jones & Co., will sell a comfortable and commodious House, with good lot attached, near the R. & G. R. R. depot.

Hughes, the Barber, on Fayetteville street, next door below the new Bank, addresses the public poetically and otherwise.

The Philadelphia Convention—Movements of the People.

At a meeting of the citizens of Guilford, Ralph. Gorrell, Hon. Jno. A. Gilmer, J. Harper Johnson, Thos. E. Cooke, L. W. Summers, Jas. N. Nelson, Rankin Smith, T. G. Wharton, William L. Kirkman, Robert E. Thom and Jas. Paisley were appointed delegates to the District Convention to be held in Greensboro' on the 25th.

A large and respectable meeting was held in Salisbury, on Saturday, over which Jas. E. Kerr, Esq., presided. The meeting was addressed in an able and patriotic manner by the Hon. N. Boyden and H. C. Jones, sr., Esq. Delegates were appointed to the District Convention, which is to assemble to-morrow.

A meeting was held in Wilmington, on the 21st. S. D. Wallace, Esq., presided. Resolutions approving the Philadelphia Convention were adopted, and delegates appointed to the District Convention, which is to meet in Goldsboro' on the 25th.

A meeting was held in Onslow, on the 17th., with similar action. Dr. Charles Duffy, sr., presided, and the meeting was addressed by Jas. H. Foy, Esq.

A meeting of the citizens of Northampton has been called for the 25th.

Let it be borne in mind that the Convention for this Congressional District assembles in this city, on Wednesday, the 25th. inst.

THE CONCERT.—We are requested, by the Lady President, to state that the grand Musical festival, to come off under the auspicies of the Ladies' Memorial Association, and in furtherance of its patriotic objects, has been postponed until Friday evening next, at which time it will certainly take place. Full particulars as to hour, place and programme will be announced in due season.

COL. WM. L. DAVIDSON, Agent of the Winchester "Stonewall Cemetery" Association, has consented to postpone his Lecture in behalf of that object, until the Fall. This is done to prevent the two patriotic designs conflicting.

MEMORIAL CEREMONIES IN WILMINGTON.—On Saturday last, the ladies of Wilmington, together with a goodly number of male residents, repaired to Oakdale Cemetery, for the purpose of decorating the honored graves of our gallant dead. The exercises were of a most touching character, and an eloquent and feeling address was delivered by Maj. J. A. Engelhard. The following are the officers of the Memorial Association of New Hanover: Mrs. J. E. Oakley, President; Mrs. Stacey VanAmringe, Vice President; Miss Belle Williams, Secretary; Mrs. Col. Gaston Meares, Corresponding Secretaro; Miss Lizzie Paresly, Treasurer.

MRS. ODOM.—We regret to learn, says the Newbern Commercial, that this most unfortunate lady, whose husband was murdered by her side and whose person was subsequently violated by the murderers of her husband, near Kinston, on Wednesday night last, has lost her mind, most mercifully it may be.

SAD OCCURRENCE IN FAYETTEVILLE.—We are pained to learn of a melancholy occurrence in our sister-town of Fayetteville. There has been a considerable freshet in the river and streams in that section, and while a number of citizens were standing, a few days since, upon what is known as Eccles' bridge, (spanning Cross Creek,) in the heart of the town, watching the freaks of the torrent, the bridge gave way, percipitating a number of persons into the creek. Two little boys, sons of Mr. McLaurin and Mr. Fuller, and a negro man named Jno. Baker, were drowned, but all the rest were either rescued or succeeded in making their escape. This is, indeed, a sad accident, and has cast a gloom over the community.

N. C. SABBATH SCHOOL CONVENTION.—At a meeting of the friends of Sabbath Schools held in this city on the 16th inst., Rev. J. M. Atkinson was called to the chair, and Rev. L. Branson was appointed secretary.

Mr. W. R. Hunter, being called on, expressed the object of the meeting to be the getting up a general interest on the subject of Sabbath Schools among all denominations throughout the State.

On motion,

Resolved, That we call a State Sabbath School Convention, to be held in the city of Raleigh on the last Tuesday of October, and that each superintendent in the State with his corps of teachers be most cordially invited to attend.

Resolved, That W. R. Hunter, R. W. Best, W. H. Crow and John Armstrong be appointed a committee to address a circular to the different superintendents in the State, and also to procure the services of two gentlemen, one to deliver a sermon and the other an address, on the subject of Sabbath Schools, during the convention.

Resolved, That the superintendents of Sabbath Schools in this city be appointed a committee to prepare appropriate musical exercises for the convention.

Messrs. W. J. Palmer, W. J. Young and L. E. Heartt, were appointed a committee of arrangements.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT OF N. C.,
Raleigh, July 23, 1866.

To the People of North Carolina.

I publish the following letter and order from Brevet Major General Robinson, for the information of the judicial officers, and other citizens of the State:

BUREAU REF'S., FREEDMEN, ABAN'D LANDS,
HDQR'S ASS'T COM. STATE OF N. C.,
Raleigh, N. C., July 13, 1866.

His Excellency Jonathan Worth, Governor, &c., Raleigh, N. C.:

Governor:—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th. instant, calling my attention to an act of the General Assembly, passed in 1865, and to the ordinances of the State Convention repealing the provisos of the 9th. section of said act, and so modifying the 11th. section that "there now exists, under the laws of this State, no discrimination in the distribution of justice to the prejudice of free persons of color," and desiring to be officially informed how, in my opinion, the question of jurisdiction now stands in matters relating to freedmen.

In reply I have the pleasure to inform your Excellency that I have this day issued an order (a copy of which is enclosed) directing the officers and agents of the Freedmen's Bureau to refer all cases to which freedmen are parties, to the proper County and State Courts, with the single exception of claims for wages due under contracts approved or witnessed by officers of the Bureau.

I have made this exception for the reason that the condition of the freedmen is believed to be such that they cannot be subjected to the delay sometimes incident to proceedings in civil Courts.

Trusting that my action may prove satisfactory to the civil authorities, and that there may be no obstacles to the fair administration of justice to all persons, I have the honor to be,

Very Respectfully, your ob't serv't,
JNO. C. ROBINSON,
Brevet Maj. Gen'l.

BUREAU REF'S., FREEDM'N & AB'D LANDS,
HDQR'S ASS'T COM. OF N. CAROLINA.
GENERAL ORDERS
No. 3.

His Excellency, the Governor of North Carolina, having officially notified the Assistant Commissioner that "there now exists, under the laws of this State, no discrimination in the administration of justice to the prejudice of free persons of color," all officers and agents of the Bureau will hereafter refer all cases to which freedmen are parties, to the proper County or State authorities, according to the nature of the case, with the single exception of claims for wages due under contracts approved or witnessed by officers or agents of the Bureau, which, not admitting of delay, will be adjudicated as heretofore.

In case of any failure, neglect or inability of the civil authorities to arrest and bring to trial persons who have been or may hereafter be charged with the commission of crimes and offences against officers, agents, citizens and inhabitants of the United States, irrespective of color, officers in charge of districts are hereby directed to arrest and detain such persons in military confinement, until such time as a proper judicial tribunal may be ready and willing to try them.

By Command of Brev't Maj. Gen. ROBINSON,
CLINTON A. CILLEY, A. A. G.

It is known that there are persons in the State, and out of it, who have sought to make the impression that our judicial officers and juries are so inimical to persons of color, and persons among us who were soldiers in the United States army during the late civil war, or who refused to serve in the Southern armies, that such persons cannot expect justice in our courts. Citizens of this State, who had served in the army of the United States, have filed petitions, addressed to the President of the United States, charging that they were persecuted by our courts, and praying for protection. Upon a reference of the petitioners to me, by the President, I have made such investigations as satisfied me, beyond a doubt, that there was no ground for the filing of such petitions. And these investigations, after having been submitted, in detail, for examination, have in each case drawn forth a response of like satisfaction from the national authorities.

Inquisitions have been made, and ex parte statements taken from persons who claim to have been aggrieved by the action or non-action of our courts and juries. None of these, as yet, so far as I know, even if taken as true, prove anything to the prejudice of any judicial officer of the State. The ability and purity and impartiality with which justice has always been administered in this State, even where a negro appealed to our Courts to assert his freedom, have never been questioned at home or abroad. Our present judicial corps will not suffer by comparison with their predecessors at any period of our history. I have referred to these things only to justify me in asking at this time for peculiar diligence and circumspection on the part of all Justices of the Peace, Sheriffs and other judicial and executive officers, in the discharge of their official duties. One of the unhappy sequents of the late civil war is an increase of crime—particularly larceny and burglary, and the too frequent failure to apprehend and punish the criminal. Every good citizen should co-operate with the officers of justice in bringing every violator of the criminal law to justice. We can, in no other way, expect a return of the quiet and security which distinguished our State before the war.

It ought to be, and I hope it is, the wish, not only of the judiciary, but of every intelligent white man in the State, to protect the lately emancipated negro in all the rights of person and of property, to which he is entitled under the laws, and thus induce him to confide in our justice, and encourage him to be honest and industrious and to acquire property and take care of it.

JONATHAN WORTH,
Governor of North Carolina.

First Appearance of the Cholera in the South.

Trustworthy private telegrams were received in this city yesterday containing the unwelcome intelligence of the arrival at Savannah of the steamship San Salvador, from New York, having on board twenty-eight cases of Asiatic Cholera. The San Salvador, we believe, sailed from New York about the same time with the Quaker City, and the fact that there has been no notable increase of the disease in that city, at the time of her departure, shows the insidious and unaccountable character which usually marks the progress of the scourge.

We learn that General Sickles had also received official intelligence confirming the above, and that, under his orders, the steamer Cosmopolitan was to have been dispatched to the Savannah quarantine ground to serve as a hospital ship.—Charleston Courrier, 20th inst.

Congress.

WASHINGTON, July 21, P. M.

SENATE.—The House joint resolution for the admission of Tennessee was taken up, debated and amended, a new preamble being substituted, declaring that Tennessee was seized by the enemies of the government in 1861, but that she now shows every disposition to conform to the Constitution and laws, and has adopted the prohibitory slavery amendment to the Constitution, and also, that proposed by the present Congress. The preamble also announces that legislature authority alone is authorized to restore the States under similar circumstances.

The amended resolution will be sent back to the House for its concurrence.

The House adopted the concurrent resolution by five majority, providing that the two Houses shall adjourn their respective Houses on the blank day of blank, to the second day of October, and if on that day there is no quorum in either House, the presiding officers shall adjourn both Houses to the first Saturday in December.

Mr. Rousseau made a speech in vindication of his caning of Mr. Grinnell, concluding by reading a copy of his resignation as a member of the House, to-day sent to the Governor of Kentucky.

The order of the House was then executed by Mr. Rousseau being called before the bar of the House, when the Speaker reminded him that a resolution had passed that he be publicly reprimanded. Nothing, he said, could add to the force of the resolution, and he merely said the gentleman was reprimanded accordingly.

MAGGIEL'S CHILLS AND FEVER PILLS!

Maggiel's Fever and Ague Pills!

MAGGIEL'S FEVER AND AGUE

PILLS!!

THESE famous remedies, known throughout the great West or the United States for their extraordinary cures of

CHILLS, FEVER AND AGUE

are now thoroughly introduced in the State of North Carolina, and can be obtained of all enterprising, first class druggists.

They act as a tonic to all debilitated systems, taken in doses of

One Pill Three Times A Day,

before meals, and should be found in every family residing in miasmatic districts.

To any skeptic or one who does not believe in these marvellous preparations,

A Box Will be sent Free

If he is not cured with one and not more than two boxes, no charge will be made. The price of the Pills is high—say but as they are a perfect cure without trouble or inconvenience, the charge is reasonable enough.

$2 PER BOX:

Address J. MAGGIEL, M. D., 43 Fulton St.
New York.

CAUTION.

Watch narrowly and guard yourselves vigilantly against counterfeits. I have just suppressed a notorious counterfeit in Wisconsin, after much trouble and expense. Purchase of only first class druggists and never of peddlers or traveling dealers.

THE EMPIRE SHINGLE MACHINE.

18 acknowledged to be, by all odds, the best Shingle Machine in America. With only ONE HORSE POWER

3000 Elegant Shingles

per hour are easily made. The machine is built entirely of Iron, very compact and easily transported. It works VENEERS, STAVES and BOX STUFF, and out of the same number of bolts of timber, one third more Shingles are made than can be done by the Sawing Machines. All the saw dust is saved by the Empire and goes into the Shingles.
